Connection to Secretary of State Hillary Clinton

Hillary Clinton and Hashim Thaci

Last December Hashim Thaci, the Prime Minister of Kosovo, was alleged to be "the head of a 'mafia-like' Albanian group responsible for smuggling weapons, drugs and human organs through eastern Europe, according to a Council of Europe inquiry report on organized crime" as then reported by Paul Lewis for the Guardian.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton visited him in Kosovo as recently as the fall. "I want you to know, prime minister," Clinton said to Thaci, during her visit to Pristina on Oct. 13 last year, "that just as we have been with you on the hard road to independence, we will stay with you. We are your partners and we are your friends and we are very committed to your future."

Serwer said that Clinton has "certainly heard the allegations against them ... . We all heard them." When asked for an interview on Hashim or what all the allegations against him were, etc... many declined to comment. Including then former secretary Albright and secretary Clinton.

Connection to Clinton Foundation and organ trafficking

In the aftermath of the U.S.-led war in Kosovo in 1999, this nascent democracy, born of an international effort to protect human rights, has become a hub of the global trade in human beings, according to human rights investigators who monitor human trafficking.

This industry, which operates in a shadowy underworld where former members of armed militias have turned into murderous enforcers in a criminal enterprise, nets an estimated $32 billion globally every year and is widely considered by international human rights' investigators to be the fastest growing criminal activity in the world.

Clinton Foundation foreign policy adviser Amitabh Desai wrote in an Aug. 17, 2011 email to several top Hillary Clinton State Department officials.

"Is Thaci still embroiled in organ harvesting issues and is that of consequence?"
